Time Equities's 64-story condo tower at 50 West Street has been a long time coming, and construction on the glassy Helmut Jahn-designed building is in the final stretch. Work has reached the 50th floor, and it's on track for a 2016 completion. Field Condition recently toured the construction site and sales gallery, giving a look at the tower's current state and a preview of the Thomas Juul-Hansen-designed interiors. The 191 condos are currently 50 percent sold. At 780 feet, the tower is kind of a shorty compared to many new condos, but thanks to its location near the southern tip of Manhattan, it still has some pretty great views.

The building's website shows off the amenities and interiors with a few animated videos, created by DBOX:
